

Why learn a new language? Here are 10 convincing reasons

INTRODUCTION

You bought a book with the intention of relaxing, but after that you pretty quickly banished it to the dust collector's shelf?

This can't and should not happen when learning a new language!

We have prepared an extraordinary education system with "Speak & Go!". It allows you to memorize new words and expressions in record time. You will soon arouse the admiration of your friends ... You can learn a new language from home (online), or abroad. Your self esteem will grow and you will become safer. But!

However, this depends on the level of motivation and of course on your commitment and study. For this reason, after years of experience, we are constantly striving to improve our education system.

Experience our proven "super learning system" with background music! It favors the relaxation and the learning ability increases by 32.9% compared to conventional lessons!

You can classify your lessons into daily mini-lessons of 2, 3, 5, 7, 10, 17 (recommended), 20, 30 or 45, achieving amazing results in a short time.

You can choose different exercises, take over and much more.

So what are the 10 most important reasons principles. Learn one or more new languages and:

1) Acquire a new awareness and more security

More awareness and safety in learning. To master a new language.

- You will soon meet new friends and make interesting trips abroad. Discover new and different cultures.
- You can help tourists who speak to you in another language
- You can understand movies in their original version without relying on subtitles
- You can read and understand foreign-language documents
- Your Internet searches that acquire new value from keywords other than your native language.

Relatives, friends, colleagues or even strangers will admire their language skills.

2) Keep in shape

The study of a new language is a stimulus for the brain, which favors several processes such as the increase in storage capacity, the retention and elasticity of an alert mind, the slowing down of the aging process (degeneration) of the brain. Is not this wonderful?

A healthy mind in a healthy body is not just an old adage, but emphasizes the important influence of the mind on the body, and sometimes vice versa. Do not forget to do neither a healthy, moderate exercise nor to go to the gym of the mind. In the long term, it will bring you a lot.

Learning Languages Boost's Brain "is the title of a BBC News article based on a study by the University of London.

3) Travel acts like a natural stimulant. Traveling, going on vacation, or language stays of several weeks or months are sources of great personal gain. Contact with local families opens up exciting new horizons. You will have the opportunity to do and say whatever you want. To learn about manners and behaviors. Words, phrases and expressions will bring you closer to new partners.

4) Can decide better

Studies conducted at the University of Chicago have found that people who speak at least one language more than their own native language are better prepared and can make difficult decisions more quickly. That certainly depends on the greater mental flexibility, but also on the newly gained self-confidence.

Learning a new language helps when you have to solve challenging decision-making processes of daily life. Would you have thought that?

5) Speaking a foreign language can be considered seductive.

Did you ever have to deal (directly or indirectly) with a person who, thanks to his foreign accent, drew your attention to the point at which you have to leave positive comments?

Have you ever heard of the "charm of the uniform"? Here we are in the presence of the linguistic, which also represents a charm of respect.

That the mastery of one or more foreign languages is a propeller in the world of work, the walls are also working. But what about the fact that it can also be a valid help for love affairs? BBC News has published an article on this topic: Languages promote work and love.

6) New friends

Attending a language course abroad promotes the formation of new friendships with exceptional people who come from all four directions.

Also short holiday trips, not infrequently, for example at a dinner, in relation to previously unknown people, between whom a special relationship is established, which is continued and maintained in their respective countries, perhaps with warm invitations to a second stimulating holiday in the respective nations, which often have nothing to do with the place where we met!

7) Study working living abroad

It's just the question of really wanting and organizing it: if you want, you can go abroad for:

- Education
- Job
- life (and possibly not just "survive")

Where would you like to find yourself when you wake up every morning? In a metropolis, maybe a capital like Madrid or Berlin. for your idea of comfort, having everything at hand? Or in the countryside or in Ireland, where you can feel comfortable with nature? In Sydney, Australia, where the sea would be the ideal backdrop for your desire to escape?

In any case: If you decide to study Spanish in Spain instead of working in Switzerland or Germany, or to spend your retirement in Portugal, mastering a new language will open more than one door. And as often happens, a satisfying stay in a place where we feel good can even become a new concrete project of life. Maybe after we meet with her soulmate to love and marry!

8) Give the career a turn

The world is constantly evolving and you know it: For years, big companies are moving abroad. This does not mean you have to do it, but if you do not want to miss the train, you need to speak at least one language more than your native language, even if you want to stay home. It is the globalization that demands it ...

So, whether you are aiming for a career at a certain level, or you want to be the last to be fired, you need to acquire new language skills. Be careful: start studying and mastering the new language that seems more relevant to you. You can still learn a second foreign language while still a hobbyist!

On the one hand, even small and medium-sized companies that want to survive on the other hand seek to outsource their products, they need on the one hand technical, but above all linguistic personnel. With your extensive language skills you relieve your employer of an important task and become an indispensable person even without a degree. It can really be your salvation; Stop and think about it!

Various surveys have shown that multi-lingual employees of various companies earn higher salaries than their colleagues who speak only one language. It seems to be the natural recognition and the logical satisfaction for the effort, is not it?

9) Enjoy getting to know new cultures

Learning new languages is not just a matter of memorizing words or becoming a grammatical genius, but above all of dealing with new cultures. What could be better and more interesting than knowing the language of a country that interests us? How many riches are contained in the caskets of folk traditions?

You have to taste it like a good dish of your traditional cuisine (finding new friends at the dining table).

Draw the best cards in your professional life, or start a sensitive relationship with your partner.

Remember: beyond your language training; The better you are able to get to know the culture and mentality of the host country, the faster you will be accepted.

10) enrich yourself human

Whether we decide to move permanently to a new country, or go there only for a certain amount of time and then return home, we will almost certainly know one thing: our country of origin, whatever it is, is not the navel of the world. We will live differently than we are used to.

We will see the world in a new way. This certainly favors better openness and more tolerance for others.

We will grow as a human.

I would like to conclude with a warm invitation:

Now pause for a few minutes and think about it seriously. There is something really important to your future:
